Hi again. The Canning Examiner says it is OK to post the article I wrote for them - unfortunately facebook doesn't support pdf uploads so I can't show you the page as published today (12 December 2008).

If members of this group are serious about bringing back the spaceship can be done.

I sent a text to the number in the ad, and was told that the previous owner of the number had recently died, and that the new holder wasn't able to provide any information on the whereabouts of the Futuro House. I'm hoping it wasn't carted off to the dump, RIP :(

the spaceship was originally a Land Office, when the area was beginning to be cleared for housing developments. If you purchased land in that part of Willetton in the early 80's you would have done so at "the spaceship".

December 18, 2008 at 4:38am

Hey Admins..... how much is "a lot of money" ?

Thanks.....

Also, is demolishing that offensive pile of crap that is currently at cnr Leach / Karel part of the budget ?

October 22, 2009 at 4:38am

Jodie Porter

Futuro was originally sited on an artificial lake, next to an upstairs sales office. I think it was on the corner of Burrengate and Apsley Rd (Karel Ave ended at Apsley road in those days) or thereabouts, before the suburb was fully developed. It was moved to the corner of Leach and Karel, not sure what year. I always thought it was a sales gimmick - promoting the new subdivision and the homes of the future.

I remember playing in this as a child as well. I lived at 24 Juniper Way (almost a space theme!) and it was always really great fun. At first I'm pretty sure it was a real estate office, then it was open to play, then it was closed up for years before it was burnt out. It is definitely a funny memory of my childhood!

September 20, 2009 at 3:43pm

Jodie Porter

I remember playing in Futuro while my parents signed up to buy a block in Burrendah, when it sat on the water. It was very "Lost in Space" (the old TV show not the more recent movie) and had plastic fruit in a bowl on the table.

Also was there the day the transport company dropped it from the crane while trying to move it. (Unless I dreamt that?)

While at university studying art, myself and a couple of mates made an alien movie using this for our ship! We used a screwdriver to remove a bottom panel to gain access and made a shot of an entity emerging from this thing. When we left an irate resident tried to claim we had broken his pop-up sprinklers (we had parked our car on his lawn) but, on seeing our costumes and camera he suddenly forgot about his anger and went all 'oh my god are you guys making a movie - cool!' we just went along with it and left without a hitch.
